

First Beggar—Why didn't you tackle that lady? She might have given you something.

Second Beggar—I let her go because I understand my business better than you. I never ask a woman for anything when she is alone; but when two women are together you can get money from both, because each one is afraid the other will think her stingy if she refuses. This profession has to be studied, just like any other, if you expect to make a success of it. See?—Leslie's Weekly.

To Explore Alaska.

Extensive explorations are about to be undertaken between the Arctic circle and the shores of the Arctic Ocean in Alaska. The exploring party will start from Bergman, nearly one thousand miles from Sitka. Alaska is about as little known as the interior of Africa was a few years ago. A specific remedy for the cure of common ills was unknown until Hostetter's Stomach Bitters was first discovered. For fifty years it has cured all stomach and bowel complaints, and today is the most celebrated medicine in the world. The Bitters will cure indigestion, dyspepsia, constipation, biliousness, headache, liver and gall. Take no substitute. The genuine must have our Private Die stamp over the neck of the bottle.

An Explanation.

"Ignorance," remarked young Borein, "they say is bliss." "Oh, that probably accounts for it," rejoined Miss Cutting. "Accounts for what?" queried the youth. "The contented and happy look you usually wear," she replied.—Chicago Daily News.

Geo. A. Points, Upper Sandusky, O., writes: "I have been using FOLEY'S HONEY AND TAR for hoarseness and find it the best remedy I ever tried. It stopped the cough immediately and relieved all soreness." Take none but Foley's.—Fischer Drug Co.

Superior Sport.

First Barefoot Boy—Come, let's break some of the glass windows in this house! The people have gone away for the summer. Second Barefoot Boy—Now, let's break 'em in the house across the street. There's somebody living there.—Brooklyn Eagle.

TO CURE A COUGH.

Stop coughing, as it irritates the lungs and gives them no chance to heal. FOLEY'S HONEY AND TAR cures without causing a strain in throwing off the phlegm like common cough expectorants.—Fischer Drug Co.

An Opinion.

She—You don't think a girl is wise to marry a man in order to reform him? He—Well, I think she is apt to have the luck of the average reformer.—Brooklyn Life.

FOR HOARSENESS.

Benj. Ingerson, of Hutton, Ind., says he had not spoken a word above a whisper for months, and one bottle of FOLEY'S HONEY AND TAR restored his voice. Be sure you get Foley's Fischer Drug Co.

Know Her Business.

Mistress (first day)—Bridget, can you make a good mock-turtle soup? Bridget—Sure I can, mum. Mistress—Well, I'm going to market now. What shall I get you for it? Bridget (a little flushed and perplexed)—Just a carrot, mum, and a bit of a turnip and onion and a very small piece of mock turtle, mum.—Leslie's Weekly.

Adolph Blumer, Grand Mound, Ia., writes: "I have used FOLEY'S HONEY AND TAR in my family and think it the best cough cure on the market. I would not be without it in my home, as there is nothing so good for coughs and colds."—Fischer Drug Co.

Miss Rumbaugh writes: "I have used FOLEY'S HONEY AND TAR for my cough and it has cured me. I would not be without it in my home, as there is nothing so good for coughs and colds."—Fischer Drug Co.

Mr. Matteraferri—Y-a-a-s; nice day for a feller to get his hair cut.—Stray Stories.

RECOMMENDS IT TO TRAVELERS. G. H. Hausman, Lima, O., Engineer L. E. & W. R. H. writes: "I have been troubled a great deal with backache. I was induced to try FOLEY'S KIDNEY CURE, and one bottle entirely relieved me. I gladly recommend it to any one, especially my friends among the train men, who are usually similarly afflicted."—Fischer Drug Co.

W. J. Shively, Batesville, O., speaking of BANNER SALVE, says: "I used it for piles, and it has done me more good than any salve I have ever used and I have tried a great many kinds."—Fischer Drug Co.

Comedy or Tragedy?

"Why do you call that play a tragedy?" she asked. "It's advertised as a comedy." "True," he replied, "but a comedy ought to have a sad ending." "And do you think this does?" "Well," he said, with masculine brutality, "the hero and the heroine are married in the last act, aren't they?"

RELIABLE AND GENTLE.

"A pill's a pill," says the saw. But there are pills and pills. You want a pill which is certain, thorough and gentle. Mustn't gripe. DeWitt's Little Early Risers fill the bill. Purely vegetable. Do not force but assist the bowels to act. Strengthen and invigorate. Small and easy to take. Ireland's Pharmacy.

Some Satisfaction.

Stranger—Suppose a policeman exceeds his authority, and assaults reputable citizens, what redress have you? Mr. Gotham—Well, those of us who get killed have the privilege of swearing at him through a spiritual medium.—N. Y. Weekly.

MODERN SURGERY SURPASSED. "While suffering from a bad case of piles I consulted a physician who advised me to try a box of DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve," says G. F. Carter, Atlanta, Ga. "I procured a box and was entirely cured. DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve is a splendid cure for piles, giving relief instantly, and I heartily recommend it to all sufferers." Surgery is unnecessary to cure piles. DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve will cure any case. Cuts, burns, bruises and all other wounds are also quickly cured by it. Beware of counterfeits. Ireland's Pharmacy.

THE CRICKET.

Still comes the breath of summer, strong and sweet In at my open window; yet, as meet Daylight and twilight, joyfully we greet The cricket's music.

These sing of summer, but as on the wane, Sing of its sweetness; also of its pain— Major and minor in its brisk refrain— The cricket's chorus.

Our friends the frogs sang of the budding spring, Sang of fresh youth and the perfumed Love King, Of birds and flowers, and life in everything In fullest measure.

Now, of those ripened pleasures we are cloyed; Weary forsooth of sweets, which oft we toyed In glowing summer; conscious of a void And heavy languor.

With cricket's chirp comes courage new and strong, Visions appear of autumn evenings long. Of cheerful fireside, books and friends and song, And social pleasures.

And now we dream of life and work renewed; Fresh blood flows in our veins, with strength renewed, We shall take up our former tasks, now strewn To summer breezes.

Have the long days in passing brought us pain? The cricket's song shall cheer us once again, Whispering that sunshine cometh after rain.

After night, dawning! So stay very near us, crickets dear! Brighten for us the fading of the year! Add to our cozy fireside's cheer, Thy kindly chirping! —Lucy Le K. Hart, in Boston Evening Transcript.

A Romance of St. Augustine

By LOUISE A. McGAFFEY.

(Copyrighted by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

ST. AUGUSTINE on fete presents the prettiest picture imaginable, and one need not be surprised to meet a romance at any turn of its quaint old streets. And the cathedral on the plaza, with its ancient Spanish belfry, would seem to be one of the most likely places in the city for a story, or, at least, for the beginning of one. So much have thought the fate that watches over our mundane affairs when on Easter Sunday of last year the bells began to ring out their joyous invitation to the world.

As the orderly crowds thronged into church two young men crossed the plaza and entered. One was in naval uniform; the other dressed as a tourist's guide, and both were bronzed as if from long sea service. They seemed to avoid attention, and took seats behind a pillar, behind which they could watch the entrance without themselves being seen.

The services were half over when a lady and a gentleman came in at the great door and passed down the aisle towards the altar. The gentleman was stout and middle-aged, the lady in the bloom of 30 years. The man seemed in the height of good humor; the woman was evidently in serious trouble.

As they passed, looking neither to the right nor to the left, one of the young men touched the other on the arm, with a glance at the pair. He was answered by a nod and presently both left the church, slipping out by a side door. In a narrow street running at right angles to the plaza they hailed a cab, into which he of the uniform stepped, drew the door to and sat down to wait.

The other, sauntering over to the plaza, took his station near a group of palms, in the shade of which two or three carriages were grouped. And soon the old bells boomed, and the people streamed out. Among them were the two for whom our amateur detective was lying in wait, and as they entered one of the carriages he managed to get near enough to hear the order to "Fort San Marco." After a moment or two spent in perfunctory gazing at the memorial shaft by the fountain he joined his friend in the side street, and together they drove away.

By three o'clock in the afternoon the fort was crowded with people. The shady courtyard and the cool corridors beneath the massive entrance held their quota, while others of the mercenary crowd flitted up the stone stairway to the ramparts above. Easter toiles blossomed by the stern bastions, and children's laughter filled the embrasures where cannon once guarded the honor of Spain.

Walking through this animated scene, a part of it, and yet foreign to it, were the young lady and the stout gentleman. There was a third person in the party now, a stranger with a distinguished air and eyes into which flames flashed as he talked. "There!" remarked Mr. Maynard, the stout gentleman, giving his case an outward flourish as he spoke.

Don Miguel nodded a smiling assent; he was too happy for words. But a cry of rage from Mr. Maynard broke in on his trance. Right under the sea wall, at the foot of the eastern glacis, a four-oared boat rocked on the incoming tide, and as Marian Maynard caught sight of it she turned to her father and said, with a sparkle in her eyes: "They are waiting for some one down there; I wonder who it can be."

"Yes, they belong to that gunboat yonder. I suppose some young naval sprig out for a lark, curse him." "Father!" exclaimed the young girl, angrily. "I mean what I say," rejoined the other. "I hate the whole service because of that impudent jackanapes with whom you have been fancying yourself in love. But that's all over."

now, thank Heaven, and I suppose I ought to laugh at him instead. What have you to say, Miguel?" he concluded, giving the Spaniard a playful poke with his cane.

"Oh, oh! What is it, senior?" replied Miguel, coming back to reality with a start.

"If say we will laugh at a certain person after we have," answered Mr. Magnall, testily. The don's reply was a scowl, and a gesture indicative of a desire to exterminate somebody. Then bending towards the young lady he raised her hand to his lips. He did not see her look of aversion; he would not have cared if he had. It was enough for him that he was about to marry a great heiress, and so be able to pay off his numerous debts; what the heiress thought or felt about it was of supreme indifference to him.

As the three moved away tourists' guide stepped out from an embrasure and walked leisurely down the stairway.

"If only my plan doesn't fail," he said to himself. He wrote something in a memorandum book in his hand, then went into the corridor below and waited. The three came down presently, the gentleman in genial mood, the girl pale and silent. The guide nimble opened a door on the right, and before the two gentlemen knew what had happened, they found themselves in a small room with a table in the center covered with maps, guide books and illustrated views of the city. An obsequious salesman took them in hand, while the guide, saying: "I will find a room for the young lady outside," slipped back into the corridor, and drew the door to behind him.

Marian Maynard, divining that something unusual was on tap, was standing flushed and trembling when the audacious guide put the paper in her hand on which he had written: "Lieut. Westville waits for you at the foot of the eastern glacis. Lose no time."

And Marian Maynard lost no time. She flew out of the dark portal, with swift step. A young man in naval uniform met her half-way, and clasping hands, they ran together, down the slope to the boat. They were in it in a trice, but had not gone many lengths from the wall when a couple of gentlemen bounced out upon them, explained waving their hands and shouting like mad. The loitering crowd took in the situation at once, and cheered the runaways, while only ironical laughter met Mr. Maynard and the don.

Something must be done however. Don Miguel set off below the fort, where he could hire a boat, and Mr. Maynard pressing a cab into his service, hurried after; the crowd streaming down the road to see the fun. It was a fine sight which now greeted the throngs on the pier. Each boat's crew did its best. Each party had its partisans who cheered as this or that one seemed about to win. But it was an anxious time to the lieutenant's well wishers until his boat reached the vessel's side, and its occupants were transferred to the deck above. The situation was intensified when, a moment later, a group appeared on the forward deck, and it became apparent that a marriage ceremony was taking place there.

By this time Don Miguel and Mr. Maynard had almost reached the goal. The former was fulminating vengeance if the proceedings were not instantly stopped; the latter calling on his daughter to come down to him on pain of his everlasting displeasure. And in the face of it all, the spectators assisting from the pier saw the ceremony going on in as orderly a fashion as if it were being conducted in the cathedral on the plaza, instead of on the deck of a gunboat, with Uncle Sam's marines as sponsors of the affair.

There was a general clapping of hands, and loud cries of "bravo!" along the pier as the ceremony ended, and the principals in it stepped back out of sight out of the pier. A warning about a "stand off down there!" from the deck arrested the Don and Mr. Maynard in the frantic endeavors to board the vessel, which had already begun to move. And the Don's crew pulled away with all their might, and soon a wide lane of blue water lay between them and the retreating vessel.

In his rage and agony Mr. Maynard groaned aloud. The don gazed after the gunboat with a look, which, if it could have been properly focused, would have blown the audacious craft to atoms. Neither spoke. A crisis had come to each in which the strongest words in their respective languages would have been weak and of no avail.

And as they sat silently staring at each other the silvery notes of the Angelus floated down from the old belfry, and died away far out at sea.

Happy Young Wrens.

A New York man who has just returned from a vacation spent in Virginia tells a story about the enormous appetites of three baby wrens which leads one to believe the proverb, "hungry as a bear." He needs revision in favor of these birds. The next day he found a nest of wrens near the place where he was stopping, and took up a position favorable for watching the birds at leisure. Within four and a half hours the mother wren had made 110 trips to the nest, and this was the bill of fare the baby birds, three in number, consumed: Twenty green caterpillars, 16 May flies, 29 unidentified insects, 11 worms, two bugs, ten grasshoppers, seven spiders, and a chrysalis or two. How is that for an appetite?—Golden Days.

"Last winter an infant child of mine had croup in a violent form," says Elder John W. Rogers, a Christian Evangelist, of Filley, Mo. "I gave her a few doses of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and in a short time all danger was past and the child recovered." This remedy not only cures croup, but when given as soon as the first symptoms appear, will prevent the attack. It contains no opium or other harmful substance and may be given as confidently to a baby as to an adult. For sale by all druggists.

Young Girls

Are often engaged in doing the work of a home under the most trying conditions. Nature cries out against the stooping and lifting, the running up and down stairs at times when labor should be as light as possible. It is owing to overstrain or self-neglect under these conditions that the foundation is laid for serious womanly disease. Irregularity is the first step to impaired womanly health.

Perfect regularity may be established by the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It will heal inflammation and ulceration and cure female weakness. It makes weak women strong and sick women well.

"It gives me much pleasure," writes Miss Ella Sapp of James-town, Guilford County, N. C., "to thank Dr. Pierce for the great good received from the use of his 'Favorite Prescription' and 'Golden Medical Discovery.' I had suffered for three years or more at monthly periods. It seemed as though I would die with pain in my back and stomach. I could not stand at all without fainting. I had given up all hope of ever being cured, when one of my friends insisted upon my trying Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. With but little faith I tried it, and before I had taken half a bottle I felt better. Now I take two bottles of 'Favorite Prescription' and one of 'Golden Medical Discovery,' and I am entirely cured, and in two months' time when all other medicines had failed."

"I won't, father. The whole amount is $5,327.50."

"I thank you for your confidence, my boy, and I will be equally frank. You may pay those debts the best way you can."—Chicago Tribune.
